GIN

Juniper

Clean, crisp and bold with juniper dominating, balanced by citrus and herbaceous notes. This is the traditional gin style perfect for gin and tonic whilst also being extremely versatile.

London Dry

Despite the name, London Dry Gin can be produced anywhere in the world. It is very dry, light-bodied and pungent and represents what most people think of when they think about gin.

Navy Strength

"Navy strength" is a relatively new term. It was coined by the branding consultant John Murphy on behalf of Plymouth Gin in 1993 for something very old — what used to be called 100° UK proof spirit. It refers to a spirit that is bottled at exactly 57% alcohol by volume

Plymouth

Slightly less dry than a London Dry Gin and more earthy in flavour, Plymouth Gin can only be produced in Plymouth using the water from the springs found in Dartmoor.

Old Tom

A sweet style gin very popular in the 18th and 19th centuries; in flavour profile, it sits between Genever and London Dry. It is seeing a resurgence in popularity due to the accelerating craft cocktail movement.

New Western

An umbrella term for a new wave of gins which is alternatively called New American or International Style. Commonly, these gins have low levels of juniper and a wider, more unusual range of botanicals; many are made by small distillers who each try to add their own unique stamp to the gin.
